

Domino's Pizza Announces Appointment of Tim McIntyre to New Communications Head Upon Retirement of Current Chief Lynn Liddle

March 30, 2016

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 30, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- Domino's Pizza, Inc. (NYSE: DPZ), the recognized world leader in pizza delivery, today announced that Lynn M. Liddle (59) will be retiring as the Company's Executive Vice President of Communications, Investor Relations and Legislative Affairs after nearly 14 years of service with the company. She will be succeeded by Timothy P. McIntyre (53), current Vice President of Communications, who has been with the Company for 31 years. Liddle plans to depart in early May.

J. Patrick Doyle, Domino's President and Chief Executive Officer, said, "I can't say enough great things about both these executives. Lynn has been a tireless representative of our brand on main street, Wall Street and in government. She has played key roles in many of our most significant financial events, including taking our company public in 2004; and has become a leading influencer in our industry."

Doyle continued, "Tim has very deep institutional knowledge, having promoted and protected our brand reputation for many years. He has served as our chief company spokesperson and is well-known in public relations and crisis management circles. He very much deserves this promotion, and I have great confidence that he will continue to do a stellar job in this new role."

McIntyre's official title will be Executive Vice President of Communications, Investor Relations and Legislative Affairs, and will report to CEO Doyle. He joined the company right out of college in April 1985. He has held many communication roles over his years at Domino's, including building and leading its PR, social media, crisis, internal communications and event planning efforts. He is a graduate of Eastern Michigan University and serves on its College of Business Marketing Advisory Board. He is a board member of Food Gatherers, an Ann Arbor based organization which exists to alleviate hunger and eliminate its causes in the community.

McIntyre commented on his new post: "I love this company, and am both honored and highly committed to continue representing Domino's in this expanded role. I'm very excited by the opportunities we have to continue to tell the Domino's story in a clear and compelling way."

Outgoing communication head Liddle joined Domino's in 2002 as Executive Vice President after a nearly 22-year career in communications for Valassis in Livonia, Michigan.
