Ann Arbor-based Domino's has renewed its title sponsorship for "Small Talk with Mark S. Lee" beginning in January, 2017. "Small Talk" is a leading business program and is the only broadcast in the Detroit region and the state of Michigan focused on small business development and entrepreneurship. "Small Talk's" mission is to provide a forum where entrepreneurs and business leaders can share their stories. The broadcast welcomes business experts and entrepreneurs to share ideas and resources focused on having a successful, sustainable business while navigating business challenges which can slow growth.

According to the 2012 U.S. Census data, Detroit has over 62,000 businesses across the city and with over 40,000 minority-owned businesses, it ranks as the fourth largest in the country. With approximately 242,000 women-owned businesses, the state of Michigan ranks ninth largest in the nation.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, small firms accounted for approximately 63% of net new jobs created between 1993 and mid-2013. Since the end of the 2008 recession, small businesses accounted for 60 percent of the net new jobs created across the country.

"The Detroit region continues its strong revitalization efforts and small businesses continue to play a major role," says Mark S. Lee, a Detroit native and President & CEO of the LEE Group, LLC. "Small Talk" continues to provide a platform for small businesses and business leaders to share their stories.

Lee continues, "With Domino's continued support, we are able to continue to provide opportunities for entrepreneurs while supporting this region's revitalization efforts. "

"Mark's audience continues to grow and provide a forum for small business owners and entrepreneurs to learn from their peers," said Tim McIntyre, Executive Vice President of Communication for Domino's. "We're proud to have helped him launch 'Small Talk' and we're happy to keep this innovative program on the air."
